The coast is characterized by a rocky seafront full of coves, with a sandy bottom.

Traveling along the coast towards the center of Palermo we come across the beach of Vergine Maria, an enchanting place with crystal clear sea, nestled between the houses of the seaside village of the same name and dominated by the massive and evocative mass of Monte Pellegrino and closed by the building of the old and famous tuna factory Florio Bordonaro.

Sanctuary of santa Rosalia

The Sanctuary of Santa Rosalia, patron saint of Palermo, is an important place of worship but also one of the most evocative monuments in the city, capable of moving famous writers such as the romantic poet Johann Wolfgang Goethe. You cannot remain indifferent to this church with a truly particular structure, which can be reached by car along a winding road from which you can enjoy a splendid view of the city of Palermo or on foot via a long staircase which for the Palermitans devoted to Santuzza is called "l'acchianata".

The church is built close to the cave where Santa Rosalia lived the last eight years of her life, forming one with Monte Pellegrino, the Sacred Mountain of the people of Palermo.

It is a touching and stunning sight, which strikes visitors for the strength of the religiosity it manages to emanate but also for the architectural ingenuity of its builders.
